

We looked for a holiday home for several years before we found Olival da Colina Verde in Algoz and we immediately knew that we had found what we were looking for. Not only are we in a small village, which is off the tourist trail, but the style and quality of the development both outside and in is exactly what wished for.

It is just a short walk into the village, where we can shop at the local market and buy fresh bread in the bakery but if we want something a bit more fancy, we are just 10 minutes from the Algarve shopping centre.

The area around Algoz is largely undeveloped so we have extensive views of the countryside and the lay out of the development itself is spacious with generous gardens.

We have been delighted with the mix of rustic features, wood burning stove, wooden floors and exposed beams and more contemporary touches like the built in sound system and walk in showers and have been equally as impressed with the quality of the finish and the attention to detail that have been lavished on our home.

Manny, Dina and Ana have always been on hand to answer our (many) questions, they have made themselves available at the drop of a hat to clarify things and walk round with us, translating when needed and taking on board our ideas and requests. Quite simply, they have made the potentially tortuous process of buying our first holiday home a pleasure.

We can't thank them enough and would recommend them and Olival da Colina Verde to anyone thinking of buying a home in the Algarve.
